Acting community mourns Glee star Cory Monteith

Remembered as a 'wonderful' man.
Victoria-raised superstar helped launch an arts project for kids last year

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Vancouver's acting community is mourning the loss of Glee star Cory Monteith, who met with the founders of a free children's theatre program called Project Limelight in the Downtown Eastside days before his sudden death in a Vancouver hotel room.

"The world has lost a truly wonderful young man. We are heartbroken. Our love goes out to Cory Monteith's family, friends and fans," reads a post on Project Limelight's Twitter.

The sentiment was echoed in countless messages from casting agents, actors and fans across the province.

The Calgary-born, Victoria-raised superstar helped launch Project Limelight last year to give youngsters an opportunity to participate in the arts and a place "to feel like they belong."

"When I was a kid, I struggled a lot with who I was and where my life was going and what I was interested in, and I was fortunate to have the arts inspire me," Monteith said in a video for the charity, founded by his own mentor, Maureen Webb, who encouraged him to start acting at a dark time in his life, he told The Globe and Mail in 2012.

A high school football star on the small screen, Monteith was a real-life hero to fellow actors for his path from working odd jobs to stardom.

But he had a history of "serious problems" with substance abuse, he told Parade in 2011. He took "anything and everything, as much as possible" and first checked in to rehab at 19 because his family feared for his life.

Monteith was found dead in a room on the 21st floor of the Fairmont Pacific Rim when staff went to check on him after he missed his checkout time on Saturday around 12:15 p.m.

Police believe he was alone when he died and did not find signs of a struggle or foul play, Const. Brian Montague said Sunday.

Monteith was with friends in his room earlier in the night — they went out to an undisclosed location downtown — but surveillance footage and key-card records show he returned alone. Authorities are interviewing those he was with.

Manhunt.
Suspect shoots at police, makes getaway

Ridge Meadows RCMP are on the hunt for a suspect who fired on a police officer and managed to escape on foot.

Mounties say an officer was on patrol in the 25800 block of Spilsbury Road in Maple Ridge early on Saturday morning when he saw two men acting in a suspicious manner and attempting to hide in bushes next to the road.

The men ran away before the officer could investigate.

The officer drove around the area in his patrol car looking for the suspects. When he tracked them down, one of the suspects drew a handgun and opened fire in the direction of the squad car.

Both men managed to get away, despite an extensive search of the neighbourhood that included assistance from the Lower Mainland police-dog unit.

Police vow that they will find the suspects.

"This was an overt act of violence towards a uniformed police officer that will not be tolerated in our community," Cpl. Alanna Dunlop said.

"Fortunately, no one was injured in this incident, but we are aggressively pursuing all leads to identify these individuals and hold them accountable for these violent actions."

The men are described as dark-skinned and wearing dark-coloured hoodies.

They most likely got in a vehicle and fled the area, police said.

Anyone with information is asked to call Ridge Meadows RCMP or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

The number of signatures on petitions suggests that most Point Grey Road residents support separate bike lanes, but a contingent is asking the city to put the brakes on the plans. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO FILE

Bike lane drama unfolds in mayor's new 'hood

Point Grey Road.
Residents divided on how to accommodate cyclists, pedestrians, motorists

emily.jackson@metronews.ca

While some residents are asking city council to put the brakes on a new bike path along Point Grey Road, it seems most are ready to pedal on separated pavement.

A petition signed by more than 1,000 people supports one of the city's final options that would shut part of the road to cars to calm traffic on the secondary arterial, resident Pamela McColl said on Sunday. On top of that, a petition by bike-advocacy group HUB, calling for a safer thoroughfare, has more than 1,110 signatures.

That's compared to dozens of yard signs and a petition signed by a few hundred asking the city to "please slow down" on the plans, organized by neighbours who believe they haven't been adequately consulted.

Consultation process

"The city bent over backwards. They seriously did everything they could."

Point Grey Road resident Pamela McColl, who says the city consulted extensively on plans to calm traffic on the thoroughfare.

That's just not the case, said McColl, who lobbied the city for two years to improve traffic on the narrow stretch that proves dicey for cyclists and pedestrians alike.

"The city bent over backwards. They seriously did everything they could," McColl said, adding that the final result — including separated bike lanes, better connections to Jericho Beach and oceanfront parks, wider sidewalks and a mix of one-way traffic patterns — is an "exceptional" option.

Amid unconfirmed rumours of people spitting on city staff, heckling at meetings and extremely high tensions, McColl said residents who didn't participate all along are now expressing concerns about the plan. (It will mean a cut in the number of parking spots.)

"I mean, this has been studied for a very long time — the really bad ideas were left on the table in January," she said.

The final report on the Point Grey-Cornwall Avenue corridor is expected on Wednesday, with council expected to make a decision next week.

Even though the city solicitor found he wouldn't be in a conflict of interest, Mayor Gregor Robertson will not vote on the issue since he has bought a home in the neighbourhood. (His old house along the Cambie Corridor sold last week for $1.95 million, according to the mayor's office.)

Verdict brings no resolution to killing of Trayvon Martin

Not guilty. Trouble may be far from over for Zimmerman as civil suit, rights case loom

U.S. President Barack Obama urged Americans to respect the decision of jurors on Sunday following the acquittal of George Zimmerman in the death of unarmed teenager Trayvon Martin, a case that has bitterly divided the country since the boy was gunned down more than a year ago.

"I know this case has elicited strong passions," Obama said in a statement, in which he referred to the slaying of the black 17-year-old as a "tragedy."

"But we are a nation of laws, and a jury has spoken. I now ask every American to respect the call for calm reflection from two parents who lost their young son."

Zimmerman's legal problems, however, seemed far from over a day after a jury of six Florida women cleared him of manslaughter and second-degree murder charges — a verdict that stunned civil-rights groups and spurred largely peaceful protests in the streets in several U.S. cities.

Justice in question

"We hope ... that the (Department of Justice) will act and will hold Mr. Zimmerman accountable for what he has done."

Ben Jealous, head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

The Justice Department said in a statement on Sunday that it's investigating Martin's death to determine whether federal prosecutors should file criminal civil-rights charges now that Zimmerman's been acquitted. The department launched a probe a year ago but stepped aside to allow Florida's prosecution to proceed.

Martin's parents are also considering a wrongful death civil suit against Zimmerman.

The verdict, many argued this weekend, proves the criminal-justice system is still inherently biased against black people, given that Martin, the unarmed victim, was successfully portrayed as the aggressor. THE CANADIAN PRESS

2012 killing

Martin was walking to his father's house in Sanford, Fla., carrying iced tea and Skittles, when he was shot by Zimmerman, a neighbourhood watch volunteer.

- Zimmerman claimed he shot in self-defence when Martin began beating on him.
- Many saw overt racism in Zimmerman's focus on a black boy in a hoodie in a gated community.

Reaction

U.S. recoils and rages

From New York to California, outrage poured from street demonstrations and church pulpits on Sunday as hundreds of protesters took to the streets.

In Manhattan, congregants at Middle Collegiate Church were encouraged to wear hoodies in memory of Trayvon Martin.

The Rev. Jacqueline Lewis, wearing a pink hoodie, urged peace and told her congregation that Martin Luther King Jr. "would have wanted us to conduct ourselves on the highest plane of dignity."

But, she added, "We're going to raise our voices against the root causes of this kind of tragedy."

Chicagoan Maya Miller, 73, said the case reminded her of the 1955 slaying of Emmitt Till, a 14-year-old who was murdered by a group of white men. Till's killing galvanized the civil-rights movement.

Miller said she feels as if "nothing has changed in 58 years."

The NAACP called for the opening of a civil-rights case against Zimmerman in an online petition addressed to Attorney General Eric Holder.

Civil-rights leaders, including the Revs. Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, urged peace in the wake of the verdict. Jackson said the legal system "failed justice," but violence isn't the answer.

Not everyone heeded those calls.

In Oakland, Calif., some demonstrators broke windows, burned U.S. flags and started fires. Some also vandalized a police squad car and used spray paint to scrawl anti-police graffiti on roads and a courthouse. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nelson Mandela. Ailing leader may be sent home

Nelson Mandela may be discharged from hospital soon to recuperate at home, said a former president of South Africa.

The prediction was made by Thabo Mbeki as he gave a memorial lecture for the African National Congress on Saturday, the Eyewitness News radio service reported.

Mandela, 94, has been in hospital for more than five weeks for a recurring lung infection, sparking an outpouring of support in South Africa and internationally. Friends who have visited him say he is on life support in the form of mechanical ventilation. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'Orangutan.' Slur thrown at black minister in Italy

Italian Premier Enrico Letta has harshly criticized a top senator who likened the country's first black Cabinet minister to an orangutan, the latest episode of high-profile racial tension in a nation grappling with immigration.

In a statement Sunday, Letta denounced Roberto Calderoli's words as "unacceptable" and "beyond every limit."

Calderoli, the Senate's vice-president and a leader of the anti-immigrant Northern League party, made denigrating remarks about Immigration Minister Cecile Kyenge at a party rally on Saturday.

"I cannot help think ... of a resemblance to an orangutan," Calderoli is quoted as saying by the Corriere della Sera newspaper.

Kyenge is a Congolese-born doctor who became Italy's first black minister in April. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lac-Mégantic disaster. Priest struggles at pulpit

The parish priest in a Quebec town gripped by tragedy said Sunday he struggled to find the words to comfort his flock.

Steve Lemay said he and his colleagues have tried to bring solace to Lac-Mégantic in the week since a train derailment killed an estimated 50 people and razed the town centre.

But he said some residents haven't even begun to grieve. With many questions still unanswered, the loss hasn't fully sunk in, he told reporters outside the Ste-Agnes Church.

"Normally, when we lose someone we love, we can see them, we can make contact," he said. "We don't have that here."

Two more bodies were pulled from the rubble on Sunday, bringing the official death toll to 35. Fifteen people remained missing, more than a week after the disaster. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Heat spurs UGM into summertime supply drive

High temps, sun in forecast. Organization seeking refillable water bottles, hats, sunscreen and clothing for those in need

matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

The Union Gospel Mission has launched a heated summer supply drive as rising temperatures threaten those in need.

UGM spokesperson Keela Keeping says the organization is in desperate need of refillable water bottles, hats and sunscreen to protect the homeless and other people expected to be stuck outside in the coming weeks.

"Heat stroke and exhaustion is a big concern," said Keeping. "Many people are in survival mode and not thinking about things like drinking water or protecting themselves from the sun. It can be quite dangerous for those who get stuck outside."

Since hearing of the UGM's needs, the Red Cross, City of Vancouver and private donors have stepped up to donate hundreds of flats of water — but UGM is still trying to amass other crucial supplies.

Environment Canada is forecasting nothing but sun for the next seven days, with temperatures hitting a high of 26 C Tuesday.

"The need will be serious," said Keeping. "We'll be sending people out into the streets, reminding people to protect themselves and educating them."

In addition to the reusable water bottles, sunscreen and hats, the UGM has need for light, long-sleeve shirts, shorts, T-shirts and underwear.

Asiana. Payout may depend on nationality

When the courts have to figure compensation for people aboard Flight 214, the potential payouts will probably be vastly different for Americans and passengers from other countries, even if they were seated side by side as the Asiana jetliner crash-landed.

An international treaty governs compensation to passengers harmed by international air travel. The pact is likely to close U.S. courts to many foreigners and force them to pursue their claims in Asia and elsewhere, where lawsuits are rarer, harder to win and offer smaller payouts.

The flight that broke apart Saturday at the San Francisco airport was carrying 141 Chinese, 77 South Koreans, 64 Americans, three Canadians, three Indians, one Japanese, one Vietnamese and one person from France when it approached the runway too low and too slow.

Agriculture. Robots could (re)revolutionize industry

On a windy morning in California's Salinas Valley, a tractor pulled a refrigerator-sized contraption over rows of budding iceberg lettuce plants. Engineers from Silicon Valley tinkered with software on a laptop to ensure the machine was eliminating the right buds.

Hired by an agricultural produce company, the engineers were testing the Lettuce Bot, a machine that can "thin" a field of lettuce in the time it takes about 20 workers to do the job by hand. It is part of a new generation of machines that target the last frontier of agricultural mechanization: Fruits and vegetables destined for the fresh market, which have thus far resisted mechanization because they're sensitive to bruising.

In this region known as America's Salad Bowl, the machines could prove revolutionary. Though they cost millions, farmers say the robots are worth it: They could provide relief from recent labour shortages, lessen the unknowns of immigration reform, and even reduce costs, increase quality and yield a more consistent product. ## New bones about it

Cody Van Megen's dog Moose examines one of many large bones found along the banks of the Bow River, heavily eroded by recent flooding, in Calgary on Friday. While Van Megen was bracing for devastation, he didn't expect to find a set of gigantic rib bones sticking out of the riverbank. Van Megen got in touch with Francois Therrien, a paleontologist at the Royal Tyrrell Museum in Drumheller, Alta. Therrien told him the discovery could be significant — potentially signalling an early bison fossil — and a team will examine in August.

Rowling outed as 'new' writer

Chamber of secrets. Critics called mystery novel with a pen name a 'scintillating debut'

An ex-military man tries his hand at writing, publishes a debut detective novel, and wins critical acclaim. But here's the twist in the tale: The true identity of the author is none other than Harry Potter creator J.K. Rowling.

It's impressive literary wizardry by Rowling, who said she relished the freedom of writing The Cuckoo's Calling under her pseudonym, Robert Galbraith.

"I hoped to keep this secret a little longer," she said in a statement released by her publicist on Sunday. "It has been wonderful to publish without hype or expectation, and pure pleasure to get feedback from publishers and readers under a different name."

The Cuckoo's Calling, a story about a war veteran turned private investigator who is called in to probe the mysterious death of a model, was published to rave reviews in April.

The Sunday Times claimed it was investigating "how a first-time author with a background in the army and the civilian security industry could write such an assured debut novel" when it connected the dots. The paper said clues included the fact that Rowling and Galbraith shared the same agent and editor, and said the book's style and subject resembled Rowling's work.

Researcher casting for hybrid saugeye fish

Anglers in Saskatchewan are being asked to help reel in information about a hybrid fish.

Chris Somers, an ecologist at the University of Regina, is hoping that anyone looking for good fishing holes before an upcoming walleye tournament will bring him a specimen that could be a cross between a walleye and a sauger, known as saugeye. "What we are trying to do is to get a DNA-based approach up and running to detect hybrids reliably," said Somers.

What's not clear is how often the species merge and what role the hybrids play in the fishery or in changing the ecology of fish. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Private sector vulnerable: Records

Gaps in the cyber-security efforts of Canadian corporations could be leaving them open to attacks by hackers, records show. "There are an increasing number of new software vulnerabilities that can be exploited to gain access to companies' networks," reads a July 2012 memo obtained under the Access to Information Act. "The scale of the problem is significant." Most Canadian critical infrastructure assets are owned by the private sector or provincial government. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tireless networking helps Mexican reach his Canadian goal

The Benavente family from Mexico enjoy life in Canada as a result of their patience, hard work and support from Scotiabank.

"We didn't think it would be so hard, but I set my goal, stayed fixed on it and there was light at the end of the tunnel," recounts newcomer Rodrigo Benavente, a Mexican trade finance specialist who networked tirelessly in order to restart his career with Scotiabank® in Toronto.

Originally landing in Vancouver in 2011, Rodrigo returned to Mexico several times to regroup with his family after unsuccessfully searching for financial positions on Canada's west coast. When he and his wife Marcela and their two teenage sons officially moved to suburban Toronto in mid- 2012, they set a 12-month deadline for Rodrigo to find a job or else return to Mexico.

Knowing just two people in Toronto, Rodrigo persistently networked while attending a university certificate program for international professionals, improving his language skills at a local college, and making contacts through the Latin American MBA Alumni Network (LAMBA), an association with Scotiabank as one of its key sponsors. "While improving my knowledge of Canadian business, customs and law, I kept networking and I didn't give up," recalls Rodrigo. He eventually found a mentor at Scotiabank who helped refine his resumé and referred him to a job posting as trade finance senior manager within the Bank.

The job offer from Scotiabank was another positive encounter with the Bank, since he had signed up for the Scotiabank StartRight® Program[1] when he first arrived in Toronto. Upon his initial visit to the branch, he was introduced to Spanish-speaking Financial Solutions Specialist Christopher Darwiche at the Scotia Plaza branch.

The Scotiabank StartRight Program offers a free day-to-day bank account for one year[2], a wide range of credit card options[3] and a number of other customized services and benefits.

"The service was great because they gave me a free account and a credit card, even though I had no job and I was starting from zero without a Canadian credit history," explains Rodrigo.

Now satisfied in his Scotiabank role helping U.S. and Canadian clients arrange trade and supply chain financing, Rodrigo eagerly offers advice to other newcomers. "You really have to set your goal, make all the connections you can, and don't give up," suggests Rodrigo. "And, since the cost of living is higher in Canada compared to Latin America, you have to plan your money carefully, by finding a very good bank to start your credit history and help save money until you get settled."

THIS ADVERTORIAL IS PREPARED BY SCOTIABANK®.

LET'S CALL A REFEREN-DUMB

URBAN COMPASS

Peter Ladner
Guest columnist

There has been a lot of misguided commentary about the proposed referendum on transit funding. The premier had a populist brain burst during the election when she blurted out the promise of a November 2014 referendum on new sources of money to keep buses and SkyTrains running and expand to new routes.

Of course: Ask the people directly! Let the people decide on which new taxes they want! Look how well it worked with the HST!

Rather than oppose this referendum, as the smarty-pants mayors, councillors and so-called forward thinkers are all doing, they should learn from the premier. Every time some piece of essential, complex infrastructure has to be funded, go to the people with a simple yes or no question. Why didn't someone think of this before?

So I propose we really put this idea into action.

What's good for the bus is good for the airport. It's time to freeze ALL spending on new infrastructure until a November 2014 referendum. Here are some new questions to add to the ballot. Remember, yes or no answers only.

New funding for a Massey Tunnel replacement: Do you approve of higher income taxes to pay for a new $1-billion tunnel?

New funding for B.C. Hydro: Do you approve of a 30 per cent increase in your hydro bill to generate power for liquefied natural gas plants in Kitimat?

New funding for sewage treatment: Do you approve of an increase in your Metro Vancouver bill to cover the $700-million cost of a new Lions Gate sewage-treatment plant?

New funding for airport improvement: Do you want to roll back the increases in user fees at the airport that pay for terminal improvements?

New funding for ferries: Do you approve of a fare increase so B.C. Ferries can keep paying huge salaries to their executives?

New funding for old bridges: Do you want to roll back tolls on the Golden Ears and Port Mann Bridges?

New funding for new bridges: Do you approve of tolls to pay for a new Patullo Bridge?

Finally, our MLAs can get out of the way and let people fed up with taxes make sure we don't get any new buses or SkyTrains, highway improvements, airport improvements, ferry replacements, or new bridges, and the people on the North Shore can stew in their own waste. Work with it — the people have spoken.

Paul Sullivan will return to his regular column July 29.

The result

Finally, our MLAs can get out of the way and let people fed up with taxes make sure we don't get any new buses or SkyTrains, highway improvements, airport improvements, ferry replacements, or new bridges.

Yellow Dragon roars again

Tourists watch as tidal waves of water are unleashed at 2,600 metres per second into the Xiaolangdi reservoir in Henan, China.

The spectacular process is part of anti-pollution efforts in the Yellow River, and officials claim it has removed tonnes of debris from the bed, improving the nation's water supply. METRO

Adapting to demand

- Pollution. In 2008, 40 per cent of water was unusable due to pollution, and 30 per cent of fish species were extinct.
- Digital solution. A new software system can flush vast quantities of water through polluted zones. It won environmental prizes and is now used across China.

The effect

The quantity, in millions of tonnes, of river-bed debris that has been cleared by this method over the past 13 years. The river now flows all the way to the sea, without stretches of desert. Millions depend on "Mother River." At 5,464 km, it's the second-longest river in Asia.

Today's weak labour market for youth is not only hurting young Canadians. It's also taking a financial toll on their middle-class parents.

There are still 200,000 fewer jobs for young Canadians than before the recession. According to TD Bank, young Canadians are not only losing out today, they also face lower wages for more than a decade as they try to catch up on missed work experience. A growing number of 20-somethings are now competing for unpaid internships in an attempt to get ahead.

While job prospects for young Canadians have deteriorated, the price of everything from tuition to rent and groceries has gone up. Yet student debt levels have remained relatively constant. So who is picking up the tab?

It's middle-class parents who are stepping in to financially support their adult children.

According to TD, more than half of baby-boom parents have continued to financially support their adult children, even after they leave school. Instead of listening to Canadians on this issue, the Harper Conservatives have cut the number of youth jobs in the Canada Summer Jobs Program by more than half, and frozen the skills training budget at 2008 levels without allowing for either inflation or population growth.

Taylor Schilling plays Brooklyn socialite Piper Chapman, who's thrown in prison for a 15-month sentence for her part in a drug running scheme. HANDOUT

Locked up and nowhere to go

Orange is the New Black. New Netflix series about a socialite doing time puts a female spin on life as an inmate

The new Netflix series Orange is the New Black opens with the provocative image of two naked women in a shower, entwined in a passionate embrace.

It's the kind of brazen kick-off obviously designed to grab attention, but star Taylor Schilling says the show's envelope-pushing nudity is different — this time the salacious scenes come from a resolutely female point-of-view.

"It doesn't to me feel like it's as sexualized as other scripts that I've read," Schilling said by phone from New York of the dramedy, which features a mostly female cast.

"And I think bodies are beautiful and it's an aspect of life in this environment."

That environment happens to be the concrete-bound setting of a U.S. federal penitentiary.

Schilling stars as privileged Brooklyn socialite Piper Chapman, who is slapped with a 15-month sentence when authorities link her to a hard-as-nails female drug-runner she romanced — and ferried cash for — more than a decade earlier.

Thrown behind bars, Piper is forced to leave behind a comfortable life with her fiancé Larry, played by Jason Biggs, and ingratiate herself with an array of outspoken, and sometimes unstable, fellow inmates.

The hour-long series comes from Jenji Kohan, best known for creating the drug-dealing mom saga Weeds, and is based on the memoir of the same name by Piper Kerman.

Schilling lauds an array of racially diverse actresses who fill out the cast and praises Kohan for offering a rare chance to see a variety of female characters on the small screen. Even the blond and seemingly delicate character Piper challenges convention, she said.

"It's a moment of divine intervention I think when you find a role that can really be a full-bodied woman, and actually I mean that in every sense of the word," said Schilling, who co-starred with Zac Efron in the big screen romance The Lucky One.

"To be a dynamic character like we all are that isn't just a love interest or isn't just the mom or isn't just the daughter (is great) — a woman that's really sitting in the seat of her own experience, that's in the middle of her own narrative, discovering who she is. ... That's, like, radical."

Laura Prepon of That '70s Show certainly shows a new side of herself as Piper's jilted ex-lover, Alex.

Incarcerated at the same facility, the former drug-runner makes a beeline for her one-time accomplice to set the record straight.

"We always made this analogy of like, I'm the spider and she's the fly," Prepon said during a recent visit to Toronto with Berman, Biggs and co-star Danielle Brooks. "And that's our relationship, where I completely control her essentially. I just kind of manipulate her with sex and all these things but they end up really falling in love. And Piper ends up actually really hurting Alex and ripping her heart out. ... So it's this really interesting dynamic."

Bieber continues ruining lives of others ... or something like that

Trouble continues to dog Justin Bieber as he makes his way across the U.S. for his summer tour, though this time it's not the 19-year-old singer who's in trouble.

Last week, Bieber took a post-concert trip to a Chicago nightclub that resulted in the club being cited for letting him in, according to an E! News report.

Bodi Chicago was issued a citation for "admitting and knowingly having underage persons in the establishment," according to a spokesperson for the Chicago Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection.

She's going from straight A's to getting her first F.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Divorce, arrests and bombings

STARGAZING
Malene Arpe
scene@metronews.ca

This week in diva suffering: 1) Mariah Carey dislocates her shoulder while shooting a video 2) Fans are upset that Madame Tussauds' Adele figure is too thin. 3) A reportedly inebriated Rihanna is escorted by security from a Polish music festival. 4) Lauryn Hill goes to prison to serve time for tax evasion. 5) Lady Gaga's new diet reportedly causes massive flatulence. 6) Ha-ha-ha-ha-ha.

• A dancer and student with the Winnipeg Ballet is dismissed after it's discovered he made gay porn. The administrators at the ballet were particularly upset over his work in Man Lake and Sleeping Barry.

• Nigella Lawson's husband files for divorce because he's annoyed she didn't come to his defense after he choked her in public. I don't blame him. It's just like that time when I stole my friend's car and then, when I accidentally ran him over, he wouldn't testify on my behalf.

• George Clooney and Stacy Keibler finally split. She wanted marriage and kids and a raise and he needed space and enough time to find someone new for awards season.

• A man is arrested at a Taylor Swift concert after posting threats on Facebook and because he carried a sign that read, "Taylor Swift is with Satan." Police said they take all threats seriously and, besides, "He's a liar. Everyone knows Satan prefers Selena Gomez."

• The Lone Rider bombs at the box office. That's too bad. We were all looking forward to Johnny Depp wearing an entire ostrich in the sequel.

Hugh Jackman.

Getting into Wolverine shape

Hugh Jackman admits he isn't afraid of stealing workout techniques from other actors — like Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson — if it means getting into tip top Wolverine shape.

"I know Dwayne and I rang him and said, 'Buddy, I saw you in the Tooth Fairy, and then I saw you in an action movie and you are massive. How do you do it?'" Jackman tells E! News. "Right as he's telling me the whole diet, someone knocked on his trailer door — and I'll never forget this moment. He goes, 'Hold on a second! I'm talking to Wolverine. You can tell them I said they can wait.'"

Elizabeth Banks.

Banks has a love for ladies

Elizabeth Banks is no stranger to locking lips with other women — and, she tells the Advocate, her two onscreen instances of same-sex smooching weren't her first.

"I've definitely made out with a few girls in my time," she tells the magazine, describing kissing a woman as "a little softer" than kissing a man. "It is nice not to have to worry about razor burn," she admits.

Look awkward, be safe

Faux tattoos help identify allergies

Just when you thought childhood awkwardness couldn't get any more … awkward, there's always something to take it to the next level.

This time around it's SafetyTats. The premise of the invention is to identify children's allergies or other vital information through temporary tattoos that can be applied anywhere on the body.

There are two different types of SafetyTats. The original ones, which are applied like regular temporary tattoos, come with standard allergy messages (such as "food allergy: nuts") and quick stick write-ons, which come in various neon colors, apply similar to a Band-Aid and allow users to write custom allergy messages.

"I remember going to an amusement park one weekend with my three kids and thinking 'I don't want to have to worry about them getting lost,'" said SafetyTats creator Michele Welsh. "I wrote my cellphone number on their arms with a ball point pen but eventually it rubbed off during the day and that's when I knew that I had to create something else."

The original safety tats last approximately three to five days depending on the activeness of the child. The quick stick write-ons last up to two weeks and are waterproof.

A boys with dustpans, girls on lawn mowers revolution

Gender roles. Our expert weighs in on a study that says siblings can have a large impact on gender stereotyping

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth, kathybuckworth.com

"Men with sisters appear to do less housework, even in middle age." A provocative and, I think, curious statement to make.

Yet, according to a paper published in the Journal of Politics, decades of data have led to this conclusion. The data suggest that siblings can have as large an impact on gender stereotyping as parents can when it comes to the running of a home.

The report goes as far as to say that the roles of brother and sister can resemble those of husband and wife. (Frankly, the only way my kids resemble a husband and wife is in a Bickersons arguing sort of way.)

How to prevent this from happening in our own home? I'm thinking maybe we could start with the philosophy of "It's only work if you're not having fun." I say this, as due to my excellent parenting skills, (or admittedly by some strange fluke), I happen to have tricked my youngest son, 11, into thinking that housework is fun.

They're paying attention

"The study tells us that our kids are watching … how we divvy up the chores we do as adults."
Kathy Buckworth

He routinely mops the kitchen floor, vacuums, and sprays glass cleaner on glass cleanable surfaces with wild abandon. He requested, and received, his very own toilet brush, that he also uses with surprising frequency. He does all of this … for fun. In fact, the day that school ended he asked if he could mop as a sort of "welcome to summer holidays treat." I magnanimously let him.

He does have siblings (a brother and two sisters), none of whom would even pick up a duster unless it were on fire, and probably not even then unless I threatened to take their phones away.

Maybe the fact that there is another brother in the house counteracts the unintentional yet subliminal boy versus girl housecleaning message. Whatever the case, the theory doesn't seem to hold water in my house.

But if that's what the research shows for other families, maybe on the whole we need to do something about this, mostly to save our daughters, and our son's future partners from having to pick up the slack, and the dirty clothes, thanks to our own procreation of boys.

The study tells us that our kids are watching us — how we divvy up the chores we do as adults and how we assign chores to our children.

Does your daughter mow the lawn? Does your son set the table? Do you have "boy jobs" and "girl jobs" in your house? Do they get to pick their chores? Take some time to mix it up this week.

Unfortunately I can't lend my own son out, as the floors need cleaning at my house.

Ga ga goo goo, where's my Tortle?

Amid the purveyors of belly casts and placenta pills, sonogram art and cord blood banks at a recent baby gear extravaganza stood a smiling Rosie Pope, pregnancy advice guru, mommy concierge to the rich and, with any luck, the Martha Stewart of maternity.

"There's Rachael Ray for cooking and Rachel Zoe for style, but who in motherhood? That's my dream," said the affable mom of three as she signed copies of her pregnancy guide, Mommy IQ, showed off her maternity clothing line and chatted up fans at this year's New York Baby Show.

Making sense of maternity and baby gear these days isn't easy, so Pope may just get her shot. More than a few moms-to-be were befuddled as they walked the crowded show floor.

There's the Tortle, for example. It's an infant hat with a soft wedge built in to battle flat head syndrome. And there's Clean Bee Baby, an eco-friendly cleaning service for strollers and car seats.

There were also numerous reinventions of the wearable baby carrier, bright and cheery seats and rides of all kinds, including one that looks like an actual car, and all-natural everything, from squeezable baby fruit to Kinder by Nature herbal wipes, loaded with certified organic aloe vera, tea tree and ylang ylang extracts.

Pope offered her view on the explosion of gear for mom, dad and baby.

"There's so much we do not need," she said. "What we do need is a safe place for the baby to sleep. We do need a safe car seat. We do need a stroller system that the car seat can snap into. What we do need is some clothes. What we don't need is shoes and hair accessories and wipe warmers and bottle warmers and all of this sort of extra stuff that really is just adding complication to what you're doing rather than making your life easier."

Puff, the productivity-killer

Cough up the coin. The cost of smoking doesn't end with the price of cigarettes

COURTNEY M. FOWLER
Metro World News

No matter how you look at it, smoking is expensive — beyond the actual pack of smokes, treatment expenses and health care for smokers often break the bank. A new study from Ohio State University shows another way that smoking has become a burden: through those little bits of time smokers use to light up. According to the June study, employing smokers will cost employers upward of $5,800 per smoker, per year. The costs due to loss of productivity because of periodic smoke breaks is more than $3,000 per smoker, per year. Attorney Gregg Salka, of the law firm Fisher & Phillip, represents employers who are concerned that employing smokers is bad for business.

As a representative for the employers, what are your biggest concerns about employing smokers?

Employers that have employees who take breaks in increments of five to 20 minutes throughout the day; if those employees are hourly, they need to be compensated. So I'm assuming that would decrease productivity just as someone who's browsing Amazon or posting on Facebook.

Is there anything else you'd like people to know about smoking and work-place productivity?

I think (employers) should really treat all their employees the same, regardless of whether they're smokers or non-smokers or Facebookers or non-Facebookers. An individual who is taking a break away from working time for whatever reason should be treated and disciplined the same.

Come for a cold one, stay for the sites: Beer can mean big business for cities

Happily ever crafter. The transformation of a once-forgotten neighbourhood in Cleveland paints a picture of the way in which breweries can bring on a boom

Brewer Joel Warger tends to a batch of beer in the Great Lakes Brewing Co. in Cleveland's Ohio City neighbourhood. ADRIAN WYLD / THE CANADIAN PRESS

To see how a small business can transform a neighbourhood, just follow the barrels.

About 30 years ago, beer lovers wanting to create their own drinks started taking over abandoned old buildings in rundown city districts, refitting them with tanks, kettles and casks, and churning out beer.

The byproduct was a boom in craft beer drinkers: Barrels shipped have more than doubled in the past decade, according to trade publication Beer Marketer's Insights.

But beer drinkers weren't the only beneficiaries. The arrival of a craft brewery was also often one of the first signs that a neighbourhood was changing. From New England to the West Coast, new businesses bubbled up around breweries, drawing young people and creating a vibrant community where families could plant roots and small businesses could thrive.

It happened in Cleveland. Once an industrial powerhouse, the Rust Belt city has been losing residents since the 1950s. Manufacturing jobs disappeared. The city nearly went bankrupt in 1978.

Marred by abandoned buildings and boarded-up stores after several hard decades, the downtown Ohio City neighbourhood, just west of the Cuyahoga River, which divides Cleveland, was "perceived as dangerous and blighted" into the 1980s, says Eric Wobser. He works for Ohio City Inc., a nonprofit that promotes residential and commercial development while trying to preserve the neighbourhood's older buildings.

Raise a glass to revitalization

"We resurrected all of them. We've beautified the neighbourhood, provided a stunning restoration."

Pat Conway, founder of Great Lakes Brewery, on transforming abandoned buildings into company quarters

Enter Great Lakes Brewing, which opened in 1988. Over the years, it's built a brewery and a brewpub from structures that once housed a feed store, a saloon and a livery stable.

"We resurrected all of them," says Pat Conway, who founded Great Lakes with his brother, Daniel. "We've beautified the neighbourhood, provided a stunning restoration."

Other breweries and businesses — a pasta maker, a bike shop, a tortilla factory, as well as restaurants and bars — followed. Newcomers are flocking to the neighbourhood, even though Cleveland's overall population is still declining. The city repaved the quiet street next to the brewery, Market Avenue, with cobblestones, and poured millions into renovating the West Side Market, whose origins date back to the 19th century.

Today, more than 100 vendors sell produce, meat, cheese and other foods there. What's going on in Cleveland is happening across the country.

Trendy small businesses like breweries and younger residents have been returning to downtown neighbourhoods in many cities across the U.S. The biggest cities are growing faster than the suburbs around them, according to census data.

Another benefit of the brewery boom: Manufacturers like brewers typically pay workers more than service businesses like restaurants or shops do. That's good for local economies.

Fire fed to Whitecaps' goal-scoring machine

MLS. Sanvezzo scores twice in 3-1 victory, takes over as league leader in goals

cam.tucker@metronews.ca

The Whitecaps' Camilo Sanvezzo celebrates his second goal against the Fire in a 3-1 win at BC Place Stadium on Sunday. DARRYL DYCK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Camilo Sanvezzo scored, and then scored again. What else is new?

The Brazilian striker is now the Major League Soccer leader in goals with 12, after he scored a pair Sunday afternoon to lead the Vancouver Whitecaps to a 3-1 victory over the visiting Chicago Fire at BC Place Stadium.

The Whitecaps improved their record to 9-5-5, and are now 7-0-3 at BC Place in MLS competition this year.

Sanvezzo put on full display his scoring talents. He's been a constant threat to put the ball in the back of the opposition's net of late, with seven goals in his last six MLS games coming into Sunday.

He broke open a scoreless deadlock in the 66th minute.

After winning the ball off a Brad Knighton punt, Sanvezzo showed some fancy footwork, beating a pair of Chicago defenders before setting the ball up perfectly for the right-footed shot.

He promptly buried it past Chicago goalkeeper Paolo Tornaghi. Knighton recorded the assist.

"I just work hard.... When I get the opportunity I try to score," Sanvezzo said.

Sanvezzo didn't waste any time adding to the team's lead and his individual total.

He scored his league-leading 12th of the season in the 71st minute, giving the Whitecaps a two-goal cushion.

Sanvezzo was subbed out of the game for Darren Mattocks in the 88th minute. No surprise that the scoring sensation was given a standing ovation from the 20,206 fans as he departed for the sidelines.

His play of late has been sublime. Sitting atop the league in goals at this point in the season is a nice accomplishment.

Better yet is the Whitecaps are winning. They're now third in the Western Conference standings.

"For me that is not important," he said of the race for the Golden Boot.

"More important for me, our club is (to) get up in the table. We are third place now ... but we play as a club and I'm very happy I'm helping the club."

Rookie Kekuta Manneh rounded out the scoring for the Whitecaps with a goal in the 84th minute.

Milestone goal

Camilo Sanvezzo's first goal Sunday was the Whitecaps' 100th in MLS competition. Head coach Martin Rennie called it "fitting" that Sanvezzo, a member of the original Whitecaps MLS team from 2011, scored the milestone goal.

Lions prove resilient in downpour against Eskimos

Andrew Harris celebrates scoring a touchdown on Saturday. JASON FRANSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

B.C. Lions head coach Mike Benevides met with a small group of reporters Sunday morning, completely dry. The same couldn't be said for the night before.

The Lions battled through a constant torrential downpour to defeat the Edmonton Eskimos by a final score of 17-3 at Commonwealth Stadium the night before.

No such thing as a retractable roof in Edmonton. Both teams were subject to the same elements and field conditions.

And after 30 minutes of football, it looked like the sopping — and unyielding — wetness would prove to be too much of an obstacle for the Lions to overcome.

"In 25 years of coaching, I've never experienced anything like that," said Benevides at the Lions' Surrey practice facility.

"It was tough sledding in the first half, but I was just proud how the guys came out in the second half. It was gritty, it showed a lot of character."

The Lions, after scoring just a single point in the first half, took over the game with a pair of touchdown-scoring drives in the third quarter.

Both scoring drives were capped off on passing plays — Emmanuel Arceneaux and Andrew Harris had the touchdown catches — but it was the run game that allowed the Lions to eventually wear down the Eskimos defence in the second half.

Shutting down the air show

97

The Lions held Eskimos QB Mike Reilly to just 97 passing yards.

Six different players had carries, with quarterback Travis Lulay leading the way with 82 rushing yards. Behind him was Harris, with 70.

The Lions employed a variety of different methods in advancing the ball upfield — from misdirection on the reverse, to high-percentage screen passes, to the long ball.

And the defence held quarterback Mike Reilly — a former Lions backup pivot — to 13 completions for just 97 yards. Edmonton running back Hugh Charles was also limited to just 36 yards rushing on 10 carries.

"There's a lot of things that (were) unsaid and unseen that were factors to the victory," said Benevides.

Horoscopes

Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may not be a peacemaker by nature but you can help defuse an explosive situation by standing between the warring parties and insisting that they cool down.

Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The only danger this week is that you might give up on something before you have really started. However difficult the task ahead of you may look it is not impossible and failure is not a foregone conclusion.

Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may sometimes act as if you don't care about what's going on in the world but you do and over the next few days you will find ways to make a difference.

Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Listen to your head by all means today but let your heart have the last word. Your emotions run deep and someone is about ignite your passions in a way they have not been ignited for quite some time.

Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
As it's the first day of a new week why not put your troubles behind you completely? Is that actually possible? Of course it is. Your reality is a reflection of what goes on in your mind.

Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Whatever you are working on you can and you will make a success of it, even if you make a few mistakes in the short-term. It's no big deal.

Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You have been through a stressful time of late, so wind down a bit and find ways to have fun without pushing yourself too hard physically or emotionally. Be kind to yourself today, and every day.

Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You deserve the best and you will get the best but it may not arrive quite as quickly as you expected. That's okay. The longer you have to wait the better the taste of success will be.

Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
What worried you yesterday is not what will worry you today and what worries you today won't be what worries you tomorrow. Which begs the question: why worry at all?

Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Don't just assume that someone knows how much you care for them: spell it out so there can be no misunderstandings. Capricorn may have a reputation as being a bit of a cold fish but it's not true. You're really all heart.

Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You may be behind in your schedule and you may be worrying how you can catch up but is there really any point? You know from experience that it will all work out in the end.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
It will pay you to be a bit more forgiving of people who have let you down or who do not come up to your exacting standards. SALLY BROMPTON
